MRS. EGGMAN TO JOIN HUSBAND IN YOKAHAMA

Mrs. Ruth Eggman of New Lenox, a teacher in the grade school in that village for the past several years, left Monday to join her husband M. Sgt. Luther Eggman in Yokahama, Japan.

Mrs. Eggman went to Seattle, Wash., where she will be assigned to a ship for the Pacific voyage. She is allowed 350 pounds of luggage, which included household furnishings and clothing.

Mrs. Eggman believes she will sail June 18 with the group of 1,000 wives and children of American servicemen stationed in Japan. The Eggmans will reside at Keio university at Yokahama which is being utilized as temporary housing for American wives.

M. Sgt. Eggman who has been in the service for 21 months, is with the army headquarters command at Yokahama.

Mrs. Eggman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hofer of New Lenox. She was married to Sgt. Eggman April 13, 1945 and last July he was sent to the Philippines and later transferred to Japan.

Schilling-Helmke Wedding

The Trinity Lutheran church in Tinley Park was the scene of the marriage of Miss Alice Schilling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Schilling of Tinley Park and Raymond F. Helmke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Helmke of Marley.

The couple was married Sunday afternoon June 2 at 3 o'clock with Rev. O. Woelzlein officiating at the double ring ceremony.

Appropriate bridal selections were played by Harry R. Voigt, as the bride's party entered the church, Miss June Koehler and Miss Valerie Albers sang a duet, "The Lord is My Shepherd."

The attractive bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin made with a fitted bodice and an illusion neckline with a chiffon yoke. The softly gathered skirt extended into a slight train. Her lace edged veil, which was first worn by the groom's mother thirty years ago, was held in place by a tiara of gardenias. Her bouquet of gardenias was accented with white ribbons. She also carried a white prayer book. Her only jewelry was a gold cross.

The Maid of Honor, Miss Myrtle Helmke, wore a gown of light blue net over tulle. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, short puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her bouquet of pink carnations and blue delphinium was tied with blue ribbon. She wore a blue net halo in her hair.

Wearing gowns identical in style to the maid of honor were the bridesmaids, Miss May Helmke and the Junior bridesmaid, Miss Elaine Mohnk. Miss Helmke's gown was a pale pink and she carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations tied with blue ribbons. Miss Mohnk's gown was yellow and she carried pink carnations tied with blue ribbon. They, too, wore matching net halos. The bride's attendants all wore gold crosses.

Acting as flower girl was little Karen Perrigo. Her white net gown was fashioned similar to that of the bride. She carried a cluster of sweet peas caught with pink ribbon.

Marvin Bormet was the ring bearer and he was attired in a white suit. He carried a tiny white heart shaped pillow holding the rings which were tied with white velvet ribbon.

Clifford Stivers of Monticello, Ill., was the best man. He is a close friend of the groom, having served with him in the army. Daniel Sass served as usher. The men in the bridal party wore white carnation boutonniers. Mr. Harold Witte, uncle of the bride, and the fathers of the bride and groom also wore boutonniers.

The mothers of the young couple wore corsages comprised of five white carnations. Mrs. Harold Witte, aunt of the bride, also wore a carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for nearly a hundred guests. The bride's table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom. A wedding supper was served at long tables. Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed.

The bride and groom departed on a short wedding trip. Soon after their return they will reside in their home on Bruce Road.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Witte of Fairmont, Minn.

Seivert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Seivert, which took place Saturday afternoon, May 18, at five o'clock in the Trinity Lutheran church in New Lenox. The Rev. Leonard Reinkne performed the single ring ceremony before an altar, beautifully decorated with bouquets and baskets of mixed flowers.

Mrs. Aurelia Bruns played the Processional and Recessional, and during the Candlelight ceremony.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a powder blue gabardine dressmaker suit, with matching accessories. She wore white gloves and a corsage of White Iris tied with a white satin bow.

Her cousin, Miss Margaret Rehr of Chicago was the maid of honor and wore a pink wool dressmaker suit with black accessories. Walter Reeser, friend of the groom, served as best man. Walter Ruthenbeck and Ernest Rydberg ushered.

Following the ceremony, a Reception and wedding dinner was served in the home of the bride's parents to approximately 100 relatives and friends. The wedding dinner was served at seven o'clock at three long U shaped tables, covered with white linen cloths and beautifully decorated with white candles, mixed bouquets of white flowers, silver service and a wedding cake for both the bride and groom, and her parents, who at the same time were celebrating their silver wedding anniversary. Both honored couples, each cut into their own wedding cake at mid night. Later, the newlyweds left on a wedding trip thru the West, where they enjoyed two weeks visiting Arizona, Yellowstone National Park and many other important and interesting parts of the West. History Of Marley Church Published

One hundred and thirteen years ago a small group of Christian men and women settled in Homer township in what was then known as the O'Plain Settlement and later known as the Yankee Settlement.

These pioneers had journeyed from their established homes in the east; been imperiled in their travels by many dangers; and had finally arrived on the edge of the vast, beautiful, prairie land of Illinois. Here they settled and met together for help and comfort and here they established a church. Eleven of these men and women of Baptist faith gathered in the cabin of Deacon Abram Snapp in Yankee Settlement and under the leadership of Rev. Allen B. Freeman, newly appointed Home Missionary for Illinois, formed the fellowship which has been the heritage of the Marley Baptist Community church.

Thus was founded on October 5, 1833 one of the first Baptist church organizations in Northern Illinois, the O'Plain Baptist church. This fellowship was organized two weeks before the first Baptist church of Chicago was formed and four years before the first Baptist Church of Joliet came into existence.

A history of this church dating from its birth up to the present time has been compiled by Iva Gillett Sproat and has been printed in book form. It gives a brief history and description of Yankee Settlement, where the first church came into existence; of Hadley, where in 1850 the first church building was erected; and of Marley where, due to lack of interest in Hadley, the present church was built in 1900.

There are sixty-three pages of interesting reading including a complete membership list; a list of pastors; a list of the service men of World War I and World War II; pictures of the Hadley Baptist church and of the present church; a story of the early Fourth of July picnics which have developed into an annual tradition; and other information of interest.

Any profit from the sale of the books will be used for placing a marker at the site of the original organization of the fellowship in Yankee Settlement, near the present Barnett school.

Anyone interested in securing a copy of this history may write to the Marley Baptist Community church, Mokena post office.

Large Crowd At Memorial Program

Memorial Day exercises at Mokena Public school were very well attended.

Mr. N. F. Heimann, president of the Mokena Civic Association, was chairman. Rev. Wm. Reimann offered the invocation. Mr. Marshall Muller, a World War II veteran, read the roll call of veterans buried in the three cemeteries in Mokena. Mr. Muller took the place of Editor Wm. Semmler who is very ill and who has had this honor. As each name was called Martha Doyle placed a flower on a white draped chair as a drummer gave a tap on the drum in tribute.

Mr. Gordon Spiess, World War II veteran, led the Pledge of Allegiance.

The New Lenox Band furnished music and Mr. Water Olson led the audience in the singing of several songs, accompanied by Mrs. Roy Kropp at the piano. Mr. Edgar Palmer assistant principal of Lindbloom high school of Chicago, was the speaker of the day, who gave a very inspiring message.

At the close of the program a line of march was formed, led by Gordon Spiess and marched to the St. John's cemetery. Here the Wm. Martin Post VFW of Mokena, dedicated the plot of ground set aside for veterans and their families. On the way to this cemetery a stop was made at the Honor Roll on Front street where a salute was given and also at the Memorial Pioneer cemetery at the grave of Mr. Denny, a Revolutionary soldier.

The day previous, Mrs. Wm. Semmler and Gordon Spiess placed a plant and flag on each veteran's grave in the St. Mary's, Memorial Pioneer, St. John's cemeteries and also at the Honor Roll.

TRAINING FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT — Mark 6:7-13; Luke 10:1, 2, 14-25-27.
MEMORY SELECTION — And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.—Matthew 10:38.

Workers for God, and with God! Such is the high privilege of the men and women who respond to his call and who go out to witness for him.

On the one side, we have a world desperately in need of the gospel, perhaps more so than any generation in history. On the other hand, we have the gospel of the saving grace of God in Christ Jesus, the only solution to the problems of mankind, the perfect answer to man's need.

How shall these two be brought together? By sending out witnesses to tell the glad tidings of redemption and peace. Where shall we find these witnesses? In the church, for only the believer in Christ is qualified to tell others of his saving grace.

Our lesson, in telling of the Lord's calling and sending forth laborers into his harvest field, gives us much helpful instruction regarding service for the Lord. We learn that

I. God Provides for His Workers (Mark 6:7-10).

Jesus sent out his twelve disciples two by two, thus providing every worker with fellowship and help in hours of discouragement and trial. This also served to keep a man in balance so that he would not become self-willed and proud of his own achievements.

It was a wise provision. Perhaps the church should have observed it with more care, and thus have saved some good workers from going astray.

They were not to be cumbered with extra equipment, nor be concerned about their daily sustenance. The Lord would provide through the hospitality and generosity of his people.

Note that the expected hospitality was not to be allowed to hinder their work (cf. v. 10 with Luke 10:7). Many a preacher or evangelist has ruined a series of meetings by letting social life hinder prayer, soul-winning, or preparation for preaching.

II. God Gives Power to His Workers (Mark 6:7, 11-13).

He gave them authority over evil spirits, so that they could drive them out. He gave them power to heal; he gave them power to preach effectively.

The man who goes forth to speak for the Lord does not have to muster up his own puny powers or depend on the weak arm of some human helper. His resources are infinite and omnipotent. He speaks for the Almighty God. He has a message with saving power.

All too often the servants of the Lord are apologetic and hesitant in their ministry. They mistake weakness for meekness, and in their desire not to assert themselves, they fail to speak a ringing "Thus saith the Lord."

We need a revival of authoritative preaching, of that holy boldness which was not afraid to rebuke sin and any unwillingness to do the Lord's will (v. 11). We need a new emphasis on repentance (v. 12).

III. God Calls Helpers for His Workers (Luke 10: 1, 2).

After the twelve were sent out, he called and commissioned the seventy. That blessed process has gone on ever since. How blessed it is that even in our day of unbelief and sin, hundreds of young men and women are going out to all the mission fields of the world to work with older and experienced missionaries.

Perhaps these words will be read by some young man or woman who has felt the promptings of the Spirit of God to go into his service. Step out by faith just now, and begin to prepare yourself for God's service. If the writer of these notes can be of help to you, do not hesitate to write to him. God is looking for more workers.

Do not overlook the important admonition in verse 2. The Lord is waiting for his people to pray for laborers for fields which stand white and ready for harvest.

IV. God Requires Self-Denial of His Workers (Luke 14:25-27).

The mighty works and the powerful words of Jesus made it impossible for people to ignore him. Multitudes followed him, but he, knowing the fickleness of the human heart, faced them with the real demands of discipleship.

The Lord was never concerned with mere numbers. He wanted followers whose hearts were right. The church has broken down its testimony in the world by its frantic desire for more members, great crowds, large church buildings, at the expense of compromise of testimony.

The requirement of the Lord is unmistakable. A man or woman who is to serve him must put him first. No worldly ambition or earthly friendship, no, not even the tender love of family, can come between the Lord and his servant. He is either Lord of all, or he is not at all.

IT MIGHT seem strange to say that a manager whose ball club has been doing very well indeed could be even close to the border line of a predicament, much less the brink of an abyss. But for ten years Boston, always a great baseball town with a great baseball tradition, has been dreaming v a i n dreams of recovering some of its lost glory. There were the winning days of Jimmie Collins, Bill Carrigan and others, who carried the Red Sox banner high. But in spite of the millions Tom Yawkey has fed into his purchases and pay roll, the Red Sox thus far have been on the outside peering in.

Joe Cronin

Now Cronin has his team winging away at a record clip. He has come through with the hitting and the pitching for which only the most rabid fan ever could hope. Outside of Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky and Bobby Doerr, no one could figure that so many Red Sox would hit so well. No one could figure Mickey Harris winning six straight, with able support from Tex Hughson, Joe Dobson and Dave Ferriss.

Can't Hold the Pace

Joe Cronin's predicament is this: no one can expect so many of his men to continue to blast the ball with such deadly effect; and no one can figure that Mickey Harris can continue to hold such winning form, although Mickey is a much improved pitcher over past seasons before the war, when he failed to break even.

If the Red Sox had broken from the wire at a steady clip, there would have been no such excitement as reigns in Boston today. As it now stands, any Red Sox slump, which is certain to occur later on after such early speed, is bound to cause a reaction up Boston way.

There is the chance, of course, that the Red Sox today have what the old Yankees once carried when they almost wrecked the league, practically closing out the season in late July or early August. It could happen. After all, Cronin's hired men have shown power at bat and power in the pitcher's box, which are the two main spots of the game. However, an early rush to the front can lead to much brooding later on.

It is still my contention that the Tigers have the best pitching staff in baseball, followed by the Cardinals. But Red Sox pitching, in addition to being an improvement over what it looked to be earlier, also has run-making and fielding support that will bag many a ball game through the summer ahead. However, Boston's long-suppressed supporters should understand that it is still a long way to October.

Chasing the Cardinals

My good friend Eddie Dyer, once a star halfback in Texas, is shocked over the fact that his team is still called a 3-5 shot against the field.

"We have a good, sound ball club," Eddie says, "but no team is that good—not even the Red Sox, today. Too many things can happen in a ball game. Too many things can happen to your best men. There are other good teams in this league, teams much improved over last season. This includes the Dodgers, Braves, Reds and the Giants. Both Cubs and Pirates will soon begin picking up speed. After all, the weather has made this an uncertain spring as far as any rating goes. I don't believe many people understand what such players as Reese, Reiser and Herman mean to the Dodgers. They are all winning ballplayers."

One of Eddie Dyer's greatest thrills so far has been the fine showing of Terry Moore, not only a great ballplayer but a fine man to have on any club. After being away from action for some time in the army, Terry has been hitting far above his prewar punch; and Terry is no longer a kid. When you look at such ballplayers as Musial, Marion, Kuroski, Moore and others—plus the Cardinal pitching staff—whether or not you are a Giant, Dodger, Cub or Brave fan, this is the club to be watched once they have squared away from the summer festivities.

It might also be suggested that Billy Southworth has turned in a fine job with the Boston Braves, a club supposed to be planted in the second division. The Braves may finish there, but they are a big improvement over the Braves of other years. They are a hustling outfit, as Billy Southworth's teams always have been.

This can be baseball's greatest attendance year, with many thousands to spare, if the two pennant races remain reasonably close, for it isn't any too easy to keep the popeyed fan keyed up when his home club is outclassed and far out of the race. The danger spots here are the Red Sox and the Cardinals, but both can run into more severe competition than one might look for. Both Messrs. Cronin and Dyer confirm this observation. Few horse races ever are won in the first quarter; this also goes for a pennant race.

BREAD LINES BEGINNING TO FORM . . . Not the depression soup lines, but bread lines caused by the rationing of flour to bakeries, has resulted in bread lines in most cities and before the doors of most bakeries. Photo shows a bread line in Detroit. The baker says he has 600 loaves daily, soon to be cut to 450 loaves, but the line-up each morning soon buys up the entire allotment.

HOW ALLIED AIR FORCE WRECKED FRANKFURT . . . Bombs from American and British air forces rained from the skies caused a vast panorama of ruin at Frankfurt, Germany. Photographs show Five Finger Place as it appeared at end of war. Insert shows same location as it appeared on a prewar German postcard. Only the little statue is unmarked. Few cities took a more sustained beating than Frankfurt.

TO BE TOGETHER . . . Courage and devotion dominating one of the truly great love stories of modern times. Maj. Hans G. Hornbostel, San Francisco, veteran of two wars and the "Bataan death march," is exerting every effort to enter the Leprosarium at Carville, La., so that he can remain at the side of his wife, who contracted the ravaging disease while in a Japanese prison camp. Major Hornbostel, who is not afflicted with leprosy, is shown with his wife as they talk with Dr. J. C. Geiger, chief of San Francisco health department.

MOON-JUMPING COWS . . . Flying cattle to South America from New York City leads the way to a new modern method of transportation of high quality breeding stock. Valued at $20,000 these Ayrshire dairy cattle are shown on plane, converted into a flying barn. The trip will take about 20 hours, instead of several days as would be necessary by rail and water. More exports of cattle will follow from the United States to other southern countries.

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

W.N.U. FEATURES

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane sets out to track down a gang of robbers who had held up a train two days earlier. He follows their trail in the desert dust of San Loreto county until his horse dies from a rattlesnake bite. Then he travels on foot, seeking water, until he collapses. Three days later he awakens in a bed, having been picked up by four horsemen led by a girl. When he calls out for a drink of water, a tall man, Monte Garcia, enters. Later Jim meets Dolores Alvaro. He is charmed by her beauty. Garcia tells him that the house is close to Sand Wells, and that Jim was near the town when he fell in a coma. Jim thanks him, but points out that there is a warrant out for Dolores.

CHAPTER IV

"Yes?" asked Doane. "Well, that's beside the point. But my story isn't."

"You expect me to deny it, your story?"

"I expected you to—yes. I see you don't. Then why the first lie?" For an instant something sinister flashed in the strange Spanish eyes; then Monte Garcia smiled suavely.

"It will be best if you do not call me liar," he said. Not many men do."

"Maybe few have caught you lying."

"Ha! That is true." Then the smoulder came to the eyes again. "Listen, my friend. We have had your story; now we will have one of mine. Both true. You are ready to listen? Eh?"

"Shoot."

"My story," began Monte Garcia, with a wisp of a smile, "is most twenty years old. The first part of it. It makes me a young man, younger than you. But already I have skill with my hands. Always my hands are my fortune. They shuffle the cards, they deal. Just nineteen years old I am, but I manage a table in the Star La Rue Silver Palace, up in Maxmilla City. In those days many men come to the Silver Palace. It is legal in those days. . . . You wish to hear this story, senior?"

Alvaro Family Was Evicted From Ranch

"Shoot, I said," mumbled Doane. Monte smiled slightly, and continued.

"It is legal, yes, yet this Star La Rue is not the man to care for things legal after all. Even in those days, the other way pays better. La Rue has one-two ranches of his own—an' on the side, as you say, he buys cattle. Where do the cattle come from? That is not the question La Rue asks. You see? If cheap, he buys. Then one day he buys something more than cattle, but without greater price. You shall hear."

"Senior don Pio Miguel Alvaro has one splendid rancho, far down here, which La Rue sees, and which La Rue want. Don Pio must sell cattle every year, to make profit. So Star La Rue comes to him."

"Don Pio," he says, 'I hear you have five hundred head of cattle to sell this spring. That true? All right. I will give you twenty dollars a head, just as they come—big, medium, or small. What do you say?'

"Done!" says Don Pio swiftly.

"The price is high for those days. Ver' high. So Star La Rue, with his men all around him, draws papers for the deal an' tells Don Pio to sign. The papers are wrote in English, which Don Pio does not read ver' well. But then he is only selling cattle, an' the money has come to his hand already. A bill-of-sale is customary in an honest deal. So Don Pio puts his name there, an' other men with La Rue they sign."

"This rancho," says Mistaire La Rue after a while, "is a good rancho, Don Pio. I think I will like it, an' the price was cheap, considering that I also get all the stock. Don Pio, I will not hurry you to move from my rancho, but be gone in ten days."

"In ten days," continued Monte Garcia, "the sheriff comes down from San Loreto an' forces Don Pio, his wife, an' his baby daughter from the house. Because he does not read English well, you see, Don Pio has signed one deed for his whole property, not a bill-of-sale for some five hundred head of cattle. Star La Rue's men are witnesses, an' each states it is certain Don Pio understood when he took the money. Now it would only seem he wanted to back out of the deal by lies, which is not allowable. Do you understand, my friend? All this happened long ago."

"I understand," Doane nodded stiffly, paused. "I can tell you other stories of the same kind. Twenty years ago this was a pretty lawless strip of country. But the past is past. Today is today, and things have changed. I'm one of the men that's helped to make that change."

"So?" said Monte, with a faint smile. "You are giving me a peek at your own hand, now, senior?"

"You know who I am," said Doane.

Monte smiled. "Of course. All along Mistaire deputy sheriff Doane. Telegrams through the railroad, if for no other reason. But my story is not finish. You wish to hear what follow, also? Eh?"

"Yes. Go ahead."

"Bien, then. An' the scene is still the same," continued Monte. "Still in Maxmilla City. Still I shuffle the cards, play the game, for I have a living to make, an' cards are the things I know best. Yet the time now is not long ago; maybe two-three years past, not longer. But there is change, as you know. Now gambling with the cards is no longer legal in this state. A new law has been passed. This makes difference in Star La Rue's Silver Palace. La Rue himself has changed—in the daytimes he is respectable, vice president of a certain Maxmilla City bank. Only on occasional nights—or when something happens—does he come to the Silver Palace, which operates now behind guarded doors without music or many lights. None the less, all kinds of men come there to gamble."

"There is one old man with a ver' bitter face who comes. He does not have much money, but he plays regularly. He likes my table sometimes. I think he is waiting for something. An' perhaps I have one better memory for the Spanish faces than another man. Anyhow, I know this old fellow—he is Don Pio Miguel Alvaro, once owner of the Rancho de los Tres Hermanos, down in this country. Usually he loses at the cards. But always he comes back, waiting for that something."

"Was this old man very slight of figure?" asked Doane softly.

"Then one night it happens. It is luck! Senior Alvaro wins one thousand dollars. Half he puts back; wins again. Twice more. Loses. For an hour the play goes. But when the old man finally stands at his chair, he has broke the bank of Star La Rue's illegal gambling palace. It is twenty-five thousand dollars he has won!"

"Star La Rue is called. He comes like one animal. He gets the old man aside."

"Play once more," he says. 'Play your luck once more—against me! At another table!'

"For one thing," says the old man firmly. 'Down in San Loreto County you have a rancho, senior La Rue. It is called Rancho de los Tres Hermanos. I would like to wager against that rancho.'

"There is much debate. For one thing the rancho is worth more than twenty-five thousand dollars. On the other hand, the old man is about to walk away with all the money he has won, or so Star La Rue thinks. So they compromise. The old man gives back to La Rue his winnings, to be kept no matter how the cards fall. That evens matters. The Rancho de los Tres Hermanos is put at stake on one matched draw of the cards."

"I have worked for Star La Rue a long while. I am the most skillful dealer he employs. So they come to my table. Star La Rue looks at me a long while an' gives a certain signal. I shuffle the cards as I know how. Three times through the deck. There is a double cut. . . . But, my friend, I already begin to plan where I will look tomorrow for a new job. Something honest now, maybe a school for telegraph operators, I think—an' so it has turned out."

Monte Garcia smiled thoughtfully to himself. He lighted a fresh cigarette with an unconsciously swift gesture. Deep in his eyes was the trace of a keen, hidden satisfaction; and also a deadly anger.

"And senior Pio Miguel Alvaro drew what card?" asked Doane.

"The ace, of course," said Monte. "But to make my little, last gesture the more perfect, Star La Rue gets the two-spot. Lower than that a gambler cannot draw."

"Uh-huh. And the after-result?"

"Yes, the after-result," considered Monte. "It would have been better had I given the two-spot to Don Pio. Sometimes fate and justice are like that."

"Meaning?"

"Star La Rue's gambling palace was illegal. We have mentioned that change. State laws have now been passed against gambling. Such a thing as a gambling debt no longer exists in the eyes of the law. Do you see? There is nothing to force a man to pay a debt of the cards."

"So Star La Rue didn't?"

"Ver' much he didn't, senior. You should know that. Does Star La Rue still not own Rancho de los Tres Hermanos? But less than a week following La Rue's debt another thing happens. An aged Spanish gentleman is shot an' killed in the yards of Tres Hermanos. His body is left unidentified. It is claimed this old man has been caught attempting to steal horses from the corrals. Nothing at all is said about his coming to claim the rancho he thinks he has won!"

Seconds of silence followed Monte's words.

"Was this old man very slight of figure?" asked Doane softly. "Did he have a silvery-white mustache and a slight scar over one eyebrow? Was the forefinger of his right hand slightly crippled, caught sometime in the dallies of a reata?"

"You describe senior Don Pio Miguel Alvaro to me," said Monte Garcia. "It is a ver' exact description."

Again long silence.

"Dios!" whispered Doane. "It was my first job under Sam Flick. That's why I remember so well. I came down to Rancho Hermanos with the coroner. They told us the old man was some cholo horse thief. No name for him. I even congratulated La Rue on his marksmanship."

Monte shrugged. "So it would have been better, you see, for me to have given the old man the two-spot."

"No!" snapped Doane.

Monte studied him for a long while behind the wisps of blue cigarette smoke. The gray-green eyes showed no emotion. Finally Monte smiled slightly.

"My friend," he said, "I thought that I would come to like you in the end."

Sheriff Sam Flick of San Loreto was in a funk. Railroad officials were pressing him on one hand; Star La Rue on the other. There were fifty rumors, and one single fact. The fact was that five horsemen had turned north from the point of the train robbery at Sand Wells and hit for the desert recesses of San Loreto county. Flick knew that they might have ridden five, or fifty miles north, and also that they then had the quarters of the compass to choose from.

Eight days had passed since the night of the hold-up at Sand Wells, and the ninth dawned with equal lack of promise. The sheriff had been back from his own trip to Sand Wells for some forty-eight hours, returning by way of Maxmilla City. If he now took a posse into the desert he knew it faced failure; if he didn't, he failed before he began, with corresponding criticism. Flick's one hope was Doane.

Better than eight days now since Doane had left for the scene. Nothing had been heard from him. Nothing was known, except that he had ridden promptly north on the supposed trail of the fugitives. Doane was the very backbone of Flick's law enforcement, and in his secret heart Flick recognized the fact. It added to his helplessness. Day by day he had confidently expected Doane's return. In Sand Wells, he had confidently expected to see his deputy ride into the horizon at every turn. Such delay had meant just one thing to the sheriff at first: Doane had hit a hot trail, too hot to drop, hanging on alone. Doane might do a thing like that. Knowing his deputy, the only thing Flick didn't expect was utter failure.

The sheriff sat over his office desk—brooding, sweating, irritable. The hour was mid-morning, the ninth day.

Deputy Jim Doane Turns in His Badge

"How are you, Sam?" Flick spun around, like a top. Stared a moment, and relaxed in his chair with an audible sigh.

"Well—Doane! Here you are at last!"

They shook hands, and Flick puffed: "Let's get to business. Things sure in a mess! What happened? Where are they? Who pulled the job? Was it that Alvaro girl?"

. . . Say, you haven't got an arrest up your sleeve, have you?"

"No," said Doane. His hand reached out and something hard dropped from the palm onto the smooth surface of Flick's desk. "No, Flick. No arrests. Just nothing, except—Well, there's my badge."

Flick stared at Doane for a long, long time. An unbelieving, stunned expression came over his red face.

"Your badge?"

"My resignation. I'm no longer a deputy sheriff in San Loreto county. I resign the position."

Flick's eyes grew. His face took a purplish cast.

"But, but—" he stuttered. "You—you can't do that!"

"I already have," said Doane.

Flick's hands were grasping the edge of the desk so hard that the knuckles were white.

"I—I never thought I'd see you fail, Doane! Break! Quit!"

"And you haven't—yet!" said Doane, leaving.

Hessian Fly Always Troublesome Factor

Proper Sowing Dates Protects Winter Wheat

By W. J. Dryden

Until recently little damage has resulted to spring wheat from the hessian fly. With winter wheat it has been another question.

In the past two years several states have reported outbreaks among spring wheat. After a succession of cool seasons with good rainfall several outbreaks were reported. At the North Dakota experiment station it was found that the Mida variety of wheat showed a high degree of resistance to the hessian fly. The Mida was not immune to the hessian fly, but its resistance was strong enough to make loss negligible.

Hessian fly maggots beneath leaf sheath in the soil.

Kansas State college found that the Pawnee is highly resistant to the hessian fly in that district. Other strains have been developed in other states.

With winter wheat, the USDA has determined the fly injury may be avoided by safe sowing dates. These dates range from September 16 in the latitude of central Michigan to October 27 in that of central Georgia. The exact safe date in any locality may be determined from state agricultural specialists.

Portable Saw Aids Pasture Expansion

Converting waste brush and timberland into profitable green pastures is an important job being performed by new portable power saws developed in the southwest as an aid to farmers whose land is covered by undesirable undergrowth.

In field operation the cutting blade is horizontal. For cutting logs to length, the blade can be raised to a vertical position. The Kraft Foods company are assisting farmers by making the portable saw available on a loan basis. By this plan they hope to assist dairy farmers to produce more milk on available acreage.

Wheel Foot Scraper

Foot Scraper Made of an Old Iron Wheel.

This type of foot scraper utilizing an old wheel with a somewhat broad rim. The wheel is slipped over one end of a round stake which has in turn been driven into the ground. About two inches from the top end of the stake a hole should be bored and a bolt thrust through to keep the wheel off the ground, allowing it to rotate and always present a clean edge.

Vitamin Deficiency May Cause Pink Eye

Lack of vitamin A, brought about by long periods of drought or lack of green feeds often causes keratitis, or pink eye, to occur in range and pasture cattle. The condition may also be caused by injury to the eye which becomes infected with the normal staphylococci and diphtheria. Treatments suggested include milk eye antiseptic and astringents. The cattle should be kept away from dust during treatment.

Axis Spy Outfit Broken in China

Rings Suspected of Causing U. S. Army and Navy Losses in Pacific.

SHANGHAI. — Twenty German, Italian and Japanese agents, all members of a Nazi-sponsored were-wolf organization that carried on war against the United States in China long after the Reich had surrendered, have been seized, American authorities here have revealed, according to the Associated Press.

The agents included Lt. Col. Ludwig Ehrhardt, head of all German military and naval intelligence in Asia and a close personal friend of Adolf Hitler. The German and Italian agents will be charged with violation of surrender terms.

Additional arrests and wholesale deportations are expected shortly, since the United States state department has urgently demanded action against Nazis and Fascists known to be in China. One official said at least 1,500 persons were on the state department's "dangerous and undesirable" list in China.

The 20 men who were seized helped Japan as well as Germany. The Japanese, it was explained, were inept at breaking codes and interpreting messages monitored from foreign radio stations, and the ring helped them perform this work.

The ring operated as the Ehrhardt bureau, with offices in Shanghai, Canton and Peiping. Officials believed they were responsible for the sinking of a number of American ships, including at least one aircraft carrier, and heavy losses in the early phases of the Okinawa and other Pacific campaigns.

The four Nazi principals arrested in Shanghai had all been interned at one time by the Chinese government and released later on a variety of pretexts. At least one was employed by the Chinese government after the end of the war.

Expert Code Breaker. Arrested with Colonel Ehrhardt in Shanghai were Bobo Habenicht, an expert Nazi code-breaker, Johannes Rathje, former personal pilot for Marshal Hermann Goering, and Wolfgang Schenke, a former newspaper correspondent who was trained as an agent by the German high command.

Habenicht early in the war broke a code of the United States coast guard and directed German submarines in the Atlantic to Allied ships. He was responsible for the sinking of many ships.

Rathje's specialty was supplying information on American aircraft installations to Japan. Schenke helped uncover Chungking agents who were smuggling Americans and other Allied nationals from occupied China to unoccupied China.

Adolfo Rosi and W. Mantovani, two of the Italians arrested, were radio operators for the Ehrhardt bureau in Shanghai. They had been operators aboard the Italian liner Conte Verdi, which was scuttled at Shanghai. They and Dr. Takashima Taiji, son of a Japanese paper mill owner.

Production Sets Peacetime High

Despite Gaps in Supplies And Labor Troubles, Record Is Broken.

WASHINGTON. — In support of its recent claim to an all-peacetime record in the production of consumer goods, the office of war mobilization and reconversion has boosted its figure on national production.

Despite great gaps in the supplies of consumer goods, officials said first quarter production actually was estimated at a 4,154 billion annual rate, and this figure may be increased as final reports come in.

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder's quarterly report gave civilian production as "more than 150 billion dollars," which President Truman said was greater "than ever before in the nation's history, in war or peace."

The report brought a backwash of skeptical criticism, mainly based on the question, "If production is so good, where are the cars, radios, shirts and stockings?"

When taken up with OWMR, the question produced a flurry of statistics put together by Snyder's staff from figures and estimates of the commerce, agriculture and labor departments and the civilian production administration.

Lists Highlights.

Summarized, some of the highlights are:

1. Autos, refrigerators, sewing machines, electric ranges, alarm clocks, and some other goods are far below the peak 1941 level. But they loom much larger on the want-list of the impatient consumer than they do in the tally of total production.

2. Tires are soaring far above 1941's big output. Washing machines still behind but coming up rapidly. Yet the consumer demand is so fast that scarcities will persist.

3. Vacuum cleaners, electric irons, and bicycles are all at two-thirds or better of the 1941 average.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3 by Sandy King

Hooray, Weather OK! Early Sunday morning May 26, according to Airmans Weather, (Portsmouth 8434) it was "roger" to fly a light plane from Chicago to the Civil Air Patrol Wing Maneuver and Air Show at the new University of Illinois Airport. My observer and I drove to Rubinkam Airport where Instructor and Flight Manager Roy Cleveland, had a Cub "perched on the line waiting for us. Quickly we climbed into the clear blue sky.

However, before we had flown half way to Champaign, weather "snafud" all reports. The ceiling became lower and we were forced to fly under a heavy overcast. Soon rain began to fall, to further dampen our spirits. Passing gigantic Chanute field at Ran toul, we noticed all AAF planes were grounded, the port looking like a sleep beauty under a blanket of clouds. New U of I Airport: Landing a light plane on a field with runways of 5,300 feet is like a little girl putting on her mom's shoes, there's odds of room to spare. One of the first planes in, we were guided to the "line" by one of the four jeeps and soon our plane was firmly anchored.

From his vantage point, high in the flight tower, Wing Commander, Lt. Col. Gordon Da Costa was receiving telegrams from pilots who were weathered down in 7 states. In St. Louis alone 40 planes were stymied.

Chicagoand pilots who beat the weather and arrived at the airport include Lt. Ted Farrington, John "Smitty" Smith, John and Richard Wasney, Lt. Bill Gartz, Emory Nadler and Mr. and Mrs. Blake. For the pilots who did arrive, and for the 10,000 spectators, Lt. Col. DaCosta decided the show would go on. Because of weather, CAA officials x'd out all but 6 events of the announced 4 hour show, among them a scheduled attempt by Arthur Lindstrom of Mattoon to break his record of 74 consecutive spins in a light plane.

Chicago to Rescue. Six Army B-25's announced the opening of the show with a loud overhead roar. Capt. Don Frazier and Lt. Maxwell flew formation in PT-17 Stearmans. Leonard Wilson of Champaign dropped bombs and demonstrated supply dropping by parachutes.

Then a Chicagoan, Ray Starzyk, who has a great reputation as an instructor at Rubinkam Airport, came through 100 percent, as always. The star of the day, he brilliantly performed precision aerobatics, spinning Cub 51 from 400 feet and making three complete turns before pulling out within 20 feet of the ground! Then looping from fifty feet he came down and ticked the runway with right and left wing tips as he gunned his plane in front of the excited spectators.

Another performer from this territory, Floyd Orrington made a parachute jump. Because of high wind and low ceiling he pulled the rip cord as soon as he left the plane at 2,000 feet. While midair he unfurled a large American flag.

A gentle, graceful glider demonstration by Earl Taynor, climaxed the show.

Harold Hulse of Harlem Airport won 2nd in the bomb dropping contest. Linda Tattersfield of Rubinkam flew away with 2nd prize in the spot landing contest.

How Time Flies: Going to the U of I Airport, a husky North wind added to the 85 MPH cruising speed and helped us make the 112 mile trip in one hour, 15 minutes. Coming back we bucked the wind and our time was two hours. In contrast with all surrounding territory, the weather at Rubinkam was still beautiful and we "spotted" the field from miles away.

Checkpoints: General Fay Uptgrove Commanding General of Chanute Field reviewed Civil Air Patrol's show. Lt. Col. DaCosta made known that C.A.P. as an AAF Auxiliary was alerted to fly the mail, starting May 27th, had the rail strike continued. Leslie Bryan, Director of Aeronautics at the U of I, is new CAP Wing Commanding Officer. At this airshow, a Bell Helicopter scheduled for appearance, couldn't come because of rain. Next show, according to Lt. Col. DaCosta, if weather grounds the helicopter, it will be loaded inside a B29 bomber, and brought in "kangaroo" style!

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 2, was:

"ANCIENT AND MODERN NECROMANCY, ALIAS MESMERISM AND HYPNOTISM, DENOUNCED"

The Golden Text was:

"My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish" (Ps. 73: 26, 27).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord" (Deut. 18: 9-12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Erring human mind-forces can work only evil under whatever name or pretence they are employed; for Spirit and matter, good and evil, light and darkness, cannot mingle. . . . As named in Christian Science, animal magnetism or hypnotism is the specific term for error, or mortal mind. It is the false belief that mind is in matter, and is both evil and good; that evil is as real as good and more powerful. This belief has not one quality of Truth. . . . The only power of evil is to destroy itself. It can never destroy one iota of good" (pp. 186, 103).

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Lanfrusti Monday, June 3 at St. Francis hospital, Blue Island. She has been named Judith Ann. Both mother and daughter are doing fine.

T-5 Reinhardt Meyer returned home Tuesday June 4 after receiving his honorable discharge at Camp McCoy, Wis. He has been in service 16 months and spent a year in the Philippines and in Korea.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvan Stover and family will move next Monday to Duluth, Minn. where they will make their home.

Boys 4H Club News
The Tinley Park Boys 4H club held their June meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Dallas Webster. Mr. Kester, 4H Leader of the group, showed the boys slides on Air Transportation and Birds. This was enjoyed by all. The boys then discussed their different projects and it was decided that at the next meeting a tour of inspection will be held.
